Even after the fire had been gotten under control there was little effort made to come to close quarters, or to explore the ruins for bodies. It was too dangerous and too uncertain in the dark. And so the work of the Department through the long night watches was almost wholly confined to pouring on water from a vantage ground of security and keeping a vigilant watch on the lair of the foe.

BLOWN AROUND MONTAUK POINT

The Eventful Voyage of the British Schooner Amy D.

The British schooner Amy D., Capt. Matthews, of Parsboro, N. S., from San Domingo City, Feb. 9, for New York, with a cargo of sugar consigned to Bertram Brothers, arived at City Island via Long Island Sound this morning after an eventful experience.

Capt. Matthews reports that, when eighty miles south of Sandy Hook, in a heavy northwest gale, the schooner lost fore-staysail, lib, flying jib and rudder.

fore-stayeall, lib, flying lib and rudder, and was blown off the coast forty miles before the vessel could be got into navigable condition.

With the genius of a Yankee skipper and a determination not to give up the ship, the captain rigged a temporary rudder with such material as he could take from other portions of the rigging not swept away, and succeeded in rounding Montauk Point and bringing his schooner to port via Long Island Sound.
